OPEN Friday & Saturday 9 A.M. - 2 P.M.

Our Mission

The Mission of the Kent Historical Society is to be the primary Kent history resource and reference center, leading the community in the collection, preservation, and interpretation of Kent's heritage through exhibitions, educational programs, and activities. Join with us. Volunteer.

Current Exhibits

The 100th anniversary of the end of WWI is Nov. 11, 2018. The KHS is now collecting artifacts from WWI for a forthcoming exhibition. If you or someone you know has any artifacts from WWI the KHS would like to display what you have. We are looking for photographs, letters, uniforms, postcards, any and all mementos. Contact us by calling (330) 678-2712 or sending us an email.

Feature Mockup

The homepage features a large banner for the "Kent Tribune: Kent's History Online". Below the banner, a callout box says "OPEN Friday & Saturday 9 A.M. - 2 P.M.". A text box below the banner states: "Over six thousand pages of the Kent Tribune have been digitally uploaded by Kent Historical Society. Now you are able to browse the paper or search specific topics. This great resource has been made possible because of the generosity of KHS members. We sincerely thank you for your efforts in contributing to this project." To the right, a sidebar for "A Brief History" includes a video thumbnail, a summary text, and a "VIEW KENT TRIBUNE" button.

Kent Tribune was founded in 1915 by John G. Paxton and Sam Baker. The first issue was published on November 18, 1915. By the spring of 1917, Paxton bought out Baker's shares. Paxton continued as sole owner of the paper until 1929 when he sold half the shares to J.B. Holm. The tribune documented the comings and goings of citizens of Kent as well as how world events affected the area. Some of the topics documented in the Kent Tribune are: Kent in WWI and its aftermath, social service, womens club, Davey Tree Kent established company, crime blotter, and much more.

Jim Tully

The first biography of the vagabond and hard-boiled writer who rocked Hollywood during the Roaring Twenties. The son of an Irish ditch-digger, Jim Tully (1886-1947) left his hometown of St. Marys, Ohio, in 1901, spending most of his teenage years in the company of hobos. Drifting across the country as a "road kid," he spent those years scrambling into boxcars, sleeping in hobo jungles, avoiding railroad cops, begging meals from back doors, and haunting public libraries. After six years on the road, he jumped off a railroad car in Kent, Ohio, with wild aspirations of becoming a writer.

How it Began

OPEN Friday & Saturday 9 A.M. - 2 P.M.

How it Began

Much of Kent's early success is due to its involvement with the booming railroad industry. However, in the beginning, railroad owners were passing up the opportunity to build in Kent. When Marvin Kent heard this, he made it his goal to convince the railroad owners to build in Kent, knowing that railroads would benefit the town greatly. On March 10, 1851, Marvin received a charter from the Franklin and Warren Railroad Companies, with more railroads to come. Marvin Kent's continual efforts in acquiring railroads resulted in the town, originally called Franklin Mills, to be renamed to Kent in his honor.

A&GW Railroad Depot

Kent's first depot was a boxcar; the second was a small frame building. When citizens requested a more substantial structure, the railroad's generosity was limited to about 60 percent of the cost. The balance was pledged by the community in a single meeting. Standing above a dam and mill race of the Cuyahoga River, the perfectly symmetrical, red brick depot was built in a Tuscan Revival style with a slate roof. One story segments hyphenated the depot's trio of two-story towers. Stone-arched windows on the upper floor were grouped in threes above a platform canopy dripping with pendants. The first floor housed the ticket and telegraph office, men's and ladies' waiting rooms, and baggage and express rooms. Big double doors on the track side led to an elegant restaurant, whose manager lived upstairs. The second floor also provided bunk space and a "Reading Room" for railroad workers. Just to the south was a wooden freight house; beyond that were rail yards with shops for building and repairing coaches and freight cars. Excerpted from: Great American Railroad Stations by Janet Greenstein Potter, Wiley Press
